FOUNDATION AWARDED ROBERT WOOD JOHNSON GRANT TO ADDRESS NURSING SHORTAGE

The Mt. Sinai Health Care Foundation was recently selected as one of 11 foundations nationwide to receive funding in the second year of Partners Investing in Nursing's Future, a national initiative to develop and test solutions to America's nursing shortage. The Foundation and its partners, the M.E. & F. J. Callahan Foundation, the Frances Payne Bolton School of Nursing at Case Western Reserve University, The Center for Health Affairs and its affiliated Northeast Ohio Nursing Initiative, and the Mt. Sinai Skills and Simulation Center at Case Western Reserve University, will develop a local program to grow the supply of nurse faculty and increase the ability to use state-of-the-art learning technologies.

Led by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation and the Northwest Health Foundation, the program encourages local foundations to act as catalysts in developing grassroots strategies to establish a stable, adequate nursing workforce. The Mt. Sinai Health Care Foundation has been awarded a two-year grant of $250,000 to help develop solutions and lead efforts within the region. The Foundation will also provide $120,000 of its own funding over two years, in addition to a $5,000 grant from the M.E. & F.J. Callahan Foundation.

The funding will be used to support a local project aimed at addressing the growing shortage of nursing school faculty. The faculty shortage has created a bottleneck that limits the number of new nurses that can be trained and educated at local nursing schools. In our local area, faculty shortages are due in part to the overall aging and subsequent retirements of seasoned nurse educators coupled with the burgeoning demand of students to enroll in nursing programs throughout the region.

"This major collaborative of nursing schools and health care providers will have an industry-wide impact on patient care throughout the region."

THE 2007 ANNUAL MEETING CELEBRATES 10 YEARS OF GRANTMAKING IMPACT

The 2007 Annual Meeting of the Foundation celebrated the completion of the first decade of grantmaking impact. Since there is no way that ten years of grantmaking impact could be captured in a short time frame, the Foundation created a special video titled How A Foundation Works When It's Really Working, which focuses on just one of many important projects that have been undertaken to improve the health of the community—that of Mt. Sinai's key role in launching a countywide system of transportation for seniors. (See related article on page 12.)

A highlight of the Annual Meeting was the presentation of the 2007 Maurice Saltzman Award to Jeffrey L. Ponsky, MD, the Oliver H. Payne Professor and chairman, Department of Surgery, Case School of Medicine and University Hospitals of Cleveland (see page 8 for full story). In addition, Bennett Yanowitz, outgoing chair, was honored for his leadership and elected life director.

Special recognition was extended to six directors who completed their Board service. Three of the six were founding directors—William H. Heller, Julian Kassen, MD, and Philip S. Sims. The other directors to complete their Board service were Marvin L. Lader, Alan R. Schonberg and Timothy F. Wuliger.

Director Julian Kassen, MD and his wife Aileen Kassen.

THE 2007 MAURICE SALTZMAN AWARD

2007 Maurice Saltzman Award
Recipient and Foundation Director
Jeffrey L. Ponsky, MD, with Board Chair Bennett Yanowitz.

JEFFREY L. PONSKY, MD

THE MT. SINAI HEALTH CARE FOUNDATION PRESENTED ITS PRESTIGIOUS MAURICE SALTZMAN AWARD TO JEFFREY L. PONSKY, MD, a dedicated physician, an outstanding teacher, an internationally known and respected researcher, Director of Surgery at University Hospitals of Cleveland, and Chair of Surgery at Case School of Medicine. In presenting the Saltzman Award to Dr. Ponsky, Donna Kelly Rego, immediate past chair, Board of Trustees, of MetroHealth Medical Center, noted that Dr. Ponsky has shared his talents, his passions, and his deep commitment to his patients, their families, his students and the greater medical world. His contributions have had major impact both locally and worldwide.

The 2007 Saltzman Award Recipient was born in Cleveland and attended Cleveland Heights High School where, according to him, he was, at best, a mediocre student. He then attended Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, where he managed to become an honor student and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He completed his medical school education at Case Western Reserve University in 1971 and was elected to Alpha Omega Alpha medical honor society. He then did surgical training at University Hospitals of Cleveland, finishing in 1976. During that time he was able to do specialty training in a newly-developing area, gastrointestinal endoscopy, which was to become a focus of his research and clinical practice. Upon completion of his residency, he joined the faculty of the Department of Surgery at University Hospitals of Cleveland, where he was the Director of Surgical Endoscopy. In 1979, at the age of 32, he was recruited to become the Director of the Department of Surgery at The Mt. Sinai Medical Center, where he remained until 1997. During his tenure at Mt. Sinai, he rose to the rank of Professor of Surgery at Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine and vice chairman of the Department of Surgery.

When Mt. Sinai was sold, our recipient joined The Cleveland Clinic as the director of Endoscopic Surgery and was the first executive director of the Minimally Invasive Surgery Center at The Cleveland Clinic Foundation. He was also the vice chairman of the Division of Education, director of Graduate Medical Education, and a member of the Board of Governors at The Cleveland Clinic. In 2005, he returned to his medical training ground, assuming the Oliver H. Payne Professorship and chair of the Department of Surgery at Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine and University Hospitals of Cleveland.

Dr. Ponsky is also a national and international medical leader, having served as president of the Society of American Gastrointestinal Endoscopic Surgeons (SAGES), president of the Ohio Chapter of the American College of Surgeons, president of the Cleveland Surgical Society, and president of the American Society for Gastrointestinal Endoscopy (ASGE). He is one of only two individuals to have been president of both the largest surgical and medical endoscopy societies in the world. He has served as chairman of the American Board of Surgery, is a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons and a member of numerous other prominent surgical societies.

In addition to being a graduate of the Case School of Medicine, he earned his Executive MBA from CWRU's Weatherhead School of Management in 1990. He received the distinguished Kaiser Teaching Excellence Award at CWRU School of Medicine in 1993; the Distinguished Service Award for 2000 by the Society of American Gastrointestinal Endoscopic Surgeons; and in 2002, he received ASGE's Rudolf Schindler Award, the highest recognition award for excellence in endoscopic research, teaching and service. Dr. Ponsky has been listed in The Best Doctors in America each year since its inception. He has published over 200 original articles and book chapters, authored or edited five textbooks and serves on the editorial board of eight journals. He is perhaps best known as one of the originators of the percutaneous endoscopic gastrostomy, which provided a minimally invasive substitute for operative placement of feeding tubes. This simple technique was developed together with Dr. Michael Gauderer in 1979 and ever since has provided improved clinical care for millions of patients throughout the world.

The presentation of the Maurice Saltzman Award continues the tradition begun 24 years ago with the establishment of this award that pays tribute to Maurice Saltzman. The Saltzman Award is presented each year to a Greater Cleveland person or persons who, in the judgment of the selection committee, have in the recent past projected and achieved some piece of work of significant value or merit to the health care interests of our community. Mr. Saltzman's commitment and achievements on behalf of the health care service needs of people everywhere provide the benchmark against which each award recipient is measured.

The selection process is always challenging. Members of the 2007 Saltzman Award Selection Committee were Chair Julian Kassen, MD; Foundation Directors Richard J. Bogomolny, Harley I. Gross, Susan Ratner, Nancy G. Wolf, MD, PhD, Bennett Yanowitz; Dean of the Case Medical School Pamela B. Davis, MD, PhD; civic leader Donna Kelly Rego; Cleveland Foundation President Ronn Richard; and Foundation President Mitchell Balk. The Saltzman Award has become one of the most prestigious honors in Cleveland. Please note that all of the past recipients are listed below and each has contributed to making Cleveland a center of medical excellence.

Dr. Ponsky continues the extraordinary tradition of contributions to the field of medicine established through the work of the past Saltzman Award winners:

HELPING SENIORS LIVE WITH COMFORT, SAFETY AND INDEPENDENCE

Throughout the Foundation's ten years of grantmaking, there has always been a special interest in programs and projects that improve the health and well being of seniors in our community. Many Foundation grants have addressed issues that allow seniors to remain healthy, comfortable and independent in the communities in which they live. The following grants awarded within the last several years have focused on creating safer environments for seniors and on training those who provide necessary support for the elderly.

Three grants awarded within the past two years have supported three different organizations in their visions of creating safer environments for seniors residing within the community. Though different in nature, each of these grants has enabled these seniors to remain in their homes as safely and independently as possible.

In 2004, the Foundation provided a grant to the Department of Family Medicine at University Hospitals/Case Medical Center for the planning and development of the Medical House Call program. The goal was to provide coordinated, comprehensive, compassionate, and easily accessible medical services to frail, low-mobility, older adults who were residing within the community. Service to the community began in March 2005, and it was soon apparent that there was a need for psycho-social support services to complement the medical care. With Foundation support through a second grant, the newest member of the inter-disciplinary provider team was brought on board to provide the skills needed to address safety issues for patients and caregivers, such as hazards in the home, and to offer educational instruction and connections to other healthcare, community, and family resources.

For a significant number of the elderly living within the community setting, the home environment is filled with potential health and injury hazards. These hazards, both environmental and physical, are a significant risk and can result in disabling and costly injuries or death. With the help of a grant from the Foundation, Environmental Health Watch has partnered with the Swetland Center for Environmental Health at Case School of Medicine and the Medical House Call program to develop, pilot and evaluate the Healthy Home Environments of the Elderly project. The goal is to integrate this multi-faceted home health and injury hazards assessment into both the Swetland Center's HUD-funded Healthy Homes & Patients Program and the Medical House Call program.

How can a relatively small, single change in a home make the environment significantly safer for seniors? Both this question and the answer were presented to the Foundation by Schnurmann House, a senior housing community for low income seniors. Through the conversion of bath tubs into showers, residents were provided a safer means to bathe, thus enabling them to continue to age in place, living independently in their own homes.

In addition to these grants that have helped seniors living within the community, the Foundation has given grants for the training of those who provide necessary support for the elderly, whether in their individual homes or in communal housing. One of the most critical issues for daily survival can be the ability of an individual to swallow. Malnutrition and dehydration are serious but preventable problems in long-term care. Recognizing the frequency of problems associated with eating and the potentially life-threatening consequences of poor feeding assistance, two organizations decided to address two separate segments of the issue of staff training in the area of feeding assistance.

Linking Employment, Abilities and Potential (LEAP) has established a Dining Assistant program within the organization's Attendant Training program, a program developed to address the direct-care workforce shortage issue through the use of non-traditional workers. This program has the potential to impact in a positive way the emotional and physical well-being of residents in nursing facilities through an improved quality of care.

Based on the awareness that many state-trained nursing assistants (STNAs) lacked the necessary professional skills in the area of safe feeding techniques, IDEAS Institute designed and distributed a curriculum specific to this critical area of service. The Meal Time Matters: Training for STNAs Caring for Older Adults project has trained and provided materials to 71 long-term care staff in the Cleveland area, with an additional 121 facilities in Cuyahoga County receiving complete training packages. The curriculum has received state, national, and international attention, acknowledging the critical need this addresses.

As the demographics show an increasing number of seniors, projects and programs that address their comfort, safety and independence will continue to be critical to improving their health and well being.

The Mt. Sinai Health Care Foundation is pleased to acknowledge that the following bequests and distributions were recently received:

GREATER CLEVELAND HEALTH EDUCATION AND SERVICE COUNCIL APPOINTS NEW PRESIDENT/CEO

Dr. Catherine Roscoe-Herbert

Dr. Catherine Roscoe-Herbert, DNP, APRN-BC, GNP, CNS, recently joined the team of The Greater Cleveland Health Education and Service Council (GCHESC) as president and CEO. The Greater Cleveland Health Education and Service Council (GCHESC) is the only non-profit in Greater Cleveland whose sole mission is to improve the health status of minorities. GCHESC is the successor organization to Mt. Sinai's long-established urban health programs.

After the Mt. Sinai sale, the Foundation helped to re-establish the entity as a stand-alone 501(c) (3) public charity, which occurred in 2000. The GCHESC has successfully implemented culturally specific services that range from cardiovascular programs to tobacco prevention and control initiatives. Working in the area of minority health disparities, GCHESC hopes to address other health issues such as HIV, diabetes, lead poisoning, and obesity among children.

Dr. Roscoe-Herbert has a strong commitment to and extensive experience with minority health and wellness programs, which will blend well with the community concerns addressed by GCHESC. Dr. Roscoe-Herbert, has served as a nursing administrator, a registered nurse (RN), and as an advanced practice nurse (APN). In addition, she was involved with many educational programs and screenings focused on health, including work with the "Healthy People 2000" project and the Ohio Commission on Minority Health.

Professionally, Dr. Roscoe-Herbert has dedicated her career to health and wellness practices, including graduating from Case Western Reserve University with a Doctorate of Nursing Practice (DNP) in 2005 and a Master's of Science in Nursing (MSN) in 1994 from the Frances Payne Bolton School of Nursing. She has been honored with the 2007 Distinguished Women in Healthcare award by the VNA Healthcare Partners of Ohio. She was also recognized by the National Black Nurses Association as "Advanced Practice Nurse of the Year." Her community involvement includes the American Academy of Nurse Practitioners, the Ohio Association of Advanced Practice Nurses, and the National Conference of Gerontological Nurse Practitioners.

The Greater Cleveland Health Education and Service Council provides programs and support to the Foundation's mission to improve the health and well-being of the urban community. In addition to funding from The Mt. Sinai Health Care Foundation, GCHESC also receives support from the Saint Luke's Foundation, the Ohio Commission on Minority Health, the Cuyahoga County Board of Health, the Ohio Tobacco Prevention Foundation, and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. The GCHESC's mission is to improve health status of minority residents in Greater Cleveland by providing: health education, health screening and support of individuals and communities to adopt healthy lifestyle behaviors. GCHESC's target population is African-Americans who live in Cleveland and inner ring suburbs. The primary target populations are those communities with a significant minority population at or below the poverty level.

- A Nurse Faculty Academy, which will enhance the teaching skills of novice nurse educators; and
- An Advanced Learning Collaborative aimed at educating nurse faculty in the techniques of experiential learning and the use of emerging technologies to support this approach to education.

"This major collaborative of nursing schools and health care providers will have an industry-wide impact on patient care throughout the region," said Mitchell Balk, president of the Foundation. "This innovative strategy to expand nursing school faculty and thereby enroll additional qualified students will have a significant impact on health in the Greater Cleveland community for years to come."

The National Partners Investing in Nursing's Future is now in its second year of a five-year, $10 million initiative. During the program's first year beginning in the fall of 2006, the 10 initial foundation partners established more than 140 partnerships between nursing organizations and local foundations to address the nursing shortage. "While the nursing shortage is a national issue, community-based interventions are necessary to finding solutions that work in different health care environments. This unique program was designed to bring regional philanthropies together to address the nursing shortage on a community-level, fostering innovations beyond what any one foundation can do alone," said Susan B. Hassmiller, RN, PhD, FAAN, senior program officer at the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

Across America, patients rely on nurses for personal, quality care delivered in their own communities – which is threatened when there is a nursing shortage. "Because all health care is local, solutions need to be tailored to meet the needs of the individual communities these nurses serve," said Judith Woodruff, JD, program director of the Northwest Health Foundation and Partners Investing in Nursing's Future. "We are pleased to offer this grant to The Mt. Sinai Health Care Foundation, which is well-qualified to explore solutions for the people of Northeast Ohio. Not only do we believe The Mt. Sinai Health Care Foundation will make significant improvements in Northeast Ohio, but we believe that the other 20 projects can exchange ideas and benefit from the work of The Mt. Sinai Health Care Foundation as well."

“HOW A FOUNDATION WORKS...WHEN IT'S REALLY WORKING”

NEW FOUNDATION VIDEO AVAILABLE ONLINE

As the Foundation approached the celebration of the completion of its first decade of grantmaking impact, we wondered how we could communicate to our friends and family how a foundation goes about accomplishing its strategic objectives. Since most people do not come in contact with foundations on a regular basis, the Mt. Sinai Public Affairs Committee, chaired by Patty Inglis, decided to take a different approach to celebrating our 10th year of grantmaking. There is no way to capture ten years of grantmaking impact in twelve minutes of video. Instead, the video we produced focuses on just one of many important projects the Foundation has undertaken to improve the health of the community . . . that of Mt. Sinai's key role in launching a countywide system of transportation for seniors.

When businesses seek to measure success, they look at market share and bottom line. Foundations measure success differently. We examine the effect our grants are having on the lives of people in our community. The video we produced gives a snapshot of Mt. Sinai's impact on the lives we touch. Titled How a Foundation Works . . . When It's Really Working, it is the story of real people who are trying to age in place, in the communities where they have lived throughout their lives. The video was debuted at the Foundation's Annual Meeting on June 14, 2007.

Surveys of Cuyahoga County seniors indicated that transportation was their number one unmet need.
